Montage Residences Palmetto Bluff
A Forever Place in the Lowcountry
One arrives at Palmetto Bluff by way of a tranquil four-mile drive through the vast nature preserve that buffers and embraces it. It’s a moment to decompress, to reconnect with wonder. A spring fawn emerges from the forest, an osprey fetches a fish to its nest. Restless children grow silent with awe, anticipating tonight’s s’mores and tomorrow’s pony rides.

Time itself relaxes, accommodating a way of life that exists in no other part of the world. This is Palmetto Bluff.
What a rich history Palmetto Bluff has. In the 16th Century, Native Americans lived off the land’s bounty as the first explorers came ashore. By the 18th Century, fifteen plantations occupied the land and raised indigo, rice and cotton. Later, a banker named Richard T. Wilson, Jr., purchased 18,000 acres and built a grand 72-room mansion, only to see it burn to the ground in 1926, leaving ruins which are still visible today.

For years, Palmetto Bluff was operated as a private hunting retreat. In 2000, Crescent Communities, a Charlotte-based real estate development company, acquired the land and soon a very special new community took shape.
The Palmetto Bluff Conservancy has a mission to protect the lush maritime forests and winding tidal creeks that define this spectacular land. Real estate sales fund this non-profit organization. Hundreds of acres have been placed in easements ... the number of homes that can be built has been reduced dramatically ... food plots for wildlife are maintained ... and property owners are made aware of the importance of "green" building. All of this is to ensure that the ancient maritime forests that are here today are as William Hilton found them 400 years ago.
A LEGACY OF LIVING WELL

Bounded by the May, Cooper and New Rivers and set amidst centuries-old maritime forests and marshes teeming with life, Palmetto Bluff is a place of experiences and connections, discovery, surprise and authenticity. The very essence of the South Carolina Lowcountry, it feels like it is from another time. With quiet streets, gas-lit walkways and wraparound porches, it rests beneath the sheltering arms of moss-draped live oaks, evoking a sense of timelessness and neighborly pace.

Here, everyday life consists of foot paths, bike trails, leisurely strolls, camaraderie and conversations.

When Palmetto Bluff is your home, you always feel welcome.

For a fortunate few families who relish this sense of place and its traditions, we introduce Montage Residences Palmetto Bluff – a limited collection of thirty-five charming homes on a private greenspace and waterfront in the shadow of the Montage Resort. Offering two-to-five bedrooms, these spacious single-story cottages are made for stretching out, settling in and living expansively. Exteriors are inspired by the existing hotel cottages with simple forms, details and clapboard walls painted warm white with silver grey roofs. The great rooms open out to porches that in turn open out to the communal green. The space flows naturally between inside and outside. The interior details are timeless and comfortable with painted wood on the walls and ceilings contrasting the warm hues of the antique heart pine floors. Homes feature screened porches, built-in grills and airy sitting rooms with fireplaces, ideal for year-round indoor-outdoor living.
